There is nothing more critical to leadership than strategic decision-making. And nothing is more strategic in decision-making than, well, strategy.

Recently our staff reviewed five of the more pivotal decisions we've made regarding strategy over the course of our church's life. We've certainly made more than these five, but these loomed large in terms of our church's foundation and formation. You may not agree with our decisions – in fact, I'm sure many of you won't. But that's what made each decision strategic; it reflected a settled choice between competing ideas.

Here were the five: <http://www.churchandculture.org/blog.asp?id=5198>
